But it must not be forgotten that the Municipal Council soil, so the successive barvests of thought in the of Shanghai has no powers of legislation and no control over the administration of justice. The Hongkong Legislative Council makes laws and also makes provision for the administration of the laws. In Shanghai there is much that could not be tolerated under the English flag, such as the administration of justice by the Mixed Court. In Hongkong the Chinese are subject to English, not Chinese law, and as a natural consequence local legislation is required. In Shanghai the foreign residents enjoy all the commercial advantages of living in contact with a large Chinese population, but they are not charged, as we in Hongkong are, with the responsibility of governing the Chinese population. The primary duty of the Municipal Council is simply to consider the comfort, convenience, and welfare of the small foreign population, which it must be admitted it does remarkably well.—The circumstances-in-Hougkong are very different. the subject of a bulky Blue Book just issued by the American Bureau of Labour, which furnishes materials, in about equal proportious, for light entertainment and serious thought. It represents the first fruits of a growing uneasiness in America as to the effects, on the social system of the country, of the extraordinary facilities for divorce which exist in the United States. Even Mr. Gladstone has been alarmed at this particular result of Home Rule. For the loosemess of the marriage tie in North America can be directly traced to the power which each separate State possesses of deciding its own marriage laws and maintaining its own divorce courts. Hence no and of confusion. What is good law in one State may be flat treason in the His Excellency the Officer Administering the I next, and a man may, by simply crossing a brook Government has been pleased to appoint Francis | convert a scandalous relationship into a perfectly Henry May, Esquire, to act as his Private respectable, and in all ways valid, marriage. Then, again, the laws of different states differ in the most wildly disconcerting manner as to the circumstances which are held to entitle a person to release from the ties of wedlook. Thus, in one case, a wife was granted a divorce on the ground that her husband had subjected her to "mental anguish" by "not coming home antil ten o'clock at night, and when he did return keeping plaintiff awake talking." another instance it was deemed an adequate reason that " the husband did not wash himself." while a third afflicted spouse was delivered from the chains of Hymen because her husband." funcied himself a spiritualistic medium, and declared be could not develop fast enough while living with her." The "great mental anguish" thus caused was probably fully up to the mark of that excited in the mind of the lady who obtained a divorce because her husband "threw into the fire a little curly dog that was her only companion;" but it is not easy to sympathise with the wife who punished her husband for accusing her sister of stealing by straightequally remarkable grounds for dissolving the instance, however, is probably this one: "My scratched very severely every night, especially It is but fair, however, to note that the indulgence of American justice is scarcely less towards husbands who desire to get rid of their wives. One obtained his desire in being set free from a termagant " who has beaten him until he was bruised and sore. She has also smashed the household wares." Another, because his wife "violently upbraided him," saying, "You are no man at all." In a third instance, the husband says, "My wife refused to keep my clothing in repair. She even refused to cook, and never sewed on my buttons." Among other assigned reasons held to be sufficient by the judges were pulling a husband out of bed by his whiskers; gadding about town, leaving the children to go supportess to bed, and leaving the husband to cook his own support threatening to kill him it he did not eat when he had no appetite; striking with pokers, fistirous, and other hard substances." This last was evidently a bad case, as American matrimonial cases go. But the result of all these facilities for divorce is no joking matter. The divorces granted in the United States during the last twenty years number the enormous total of 328,716, and they are increasing at afformidable ratio. They rose from 9,937 a year in 1867 to 25,535 in 1886, showing an in crease of nearly 157 per cent. while the popul tion increased only 60 per cent. It is noteworthy that wives obtained divorces in the proportion of nearly two to one of husbands, and that desertion was the ground of action in the great majority

> Several ingenious machines for the various operations in the match manufacture have already been invented in Scandinavia, and more are shortly expected. Both in Sweden and Norway machines for packing the matches have recently been tried, and it is understood with very good results. The Norwegian machine is the invention of two young engineers at Govik, and is said to be able to pack 1.000 boxes per minute, which is equal to the work of forty packers. The other machine is invented by a Swedish engineer of Stockholm, but can probably not compete with the former.

Bakery ..... the cost, of the electric light :- " One of the latest novelties is the introduction of an auto-H. H. L. Tramways.. matic supply of electric light into the railway carriages of the District Railway, even into those H. & K. Wharf & G. of the third-class. A passenger places a penny H. Steam Laundry. in the slot, presses a button, and directly a Hongkong Rope. bright, soft light gleams upon his newspaper, H.& W. Dock...... but for him only, as it issues from the bettern of Hotels the box in which the apparatus is confined, and does not irradiate the pages of his neighbour's paper. He gets the whole, as nearly as possible, of his pennyworth. His coin sets in motion a clockwork meter, which gives him the light for nsurancesa quarter of an bour. If his journey is longer, and he desires more light, the investment must be renewed." . Of course, the clockwork meter, &c., add to the expense.

Some good anecdotes are already being told about the influenza epidemic, but the following caps any that have hitherto been seen. It happened in Germany. One of the railway employes of a much-frequented line, whose duty it was to stand at a level crossing, flag in hand, when the train passed, thought he had influenza, and applied to the authorities for a visit of the company's medical adviser. The latter, however, was extremely busy, and could not see his way to travel to the out-of-the way village where the flagman lived. He was, however, a man of resources, and ordered the patient to stand at his | Marinburk Fur. Co... post when a certain train came by in which the Miningdoctor was travelling, and to put his tongue out as far as he possibly could, in order that the medico might see what was the matter. The flagmen, nothing danated, obeyed the order, with the result that the company received no end of letters in which complaints were made about the extreme radeness of one of the company's employes ...

Ah Sing, the Chinaman, who died under sad circumstances recently in the East-end of Lon- Shai & H. Wharf . don, was certainly, says a correspondent, con- Shanghai Water. nected with English literature, inasmuch as he Steamship Coys .figures in Dickens's unfinished story of "Edwin Frood" He was the proprietor of the opium-To mentioned in that work, and was at the time when the novelist portrayed him in more or less flourishing circumstances. But when, about two years ago, the writer of this note paid a visit of curiosity to "Mr. Johnson," as he called himself, the once prosperous Celestial was in very low water, and declared that he was, in fact, very much in the position of another darkkinned celebrity, with his " occupation gone." certainly not ill-described as an opium den. In Last year's New Malwa.....$580 1 to 15 his habitual use of the article which he sold and partly to poverty, Ah Sing did not however, rail at his fate, and in his strange Pidgin English continually reiterated his sense of the beneficence of Providence.

A improved sleeping berth for ship's use has been patented by Thomas Howie. The inventor's aim was so to arrange and suspend a ship's sleeping berth that its equilibrium is maintained under all conditions in order to counteract the uneven motion of a ship when at sea, and by this means provent nauses and sea-sickness caused by the rolling and pitching of the vessel. The principle adopted is that the weight of the occupant is counterbalanced by means of adjustable weights made to run in slots at either end of uprights supporting the berth, the apparatus acting inversely to the motion of the vessel. The whole of the berth and apparatus combined with it is encompassed within an iron frame carefully balanced upon two substantial columns. By this means the lateral motion of the vessel acting upon the berth is subdued and controlled, the undulatory motion of the berth being resisted by atmospheric pressure from air chambers arranged above and below the berth, which is thus regulated relatively to the violence of its motion.

The French engineers have partially realized Shanghai one of the dreams of M. Jules Verne, the clever Hongkong ... movelist, whose method it is to exaggerate the Halphong .... powers of scientific appliances till they become Manile almost supernatural agencies. On December Mapile 29.88 22nd, a submarine hoat, about 45 feet long and 5 fest 7 inches in diameter, driven by electric accumulators, was tried in the harbour of Toulon. The boat, which is called the Gymnots, or electric sel, plunged under water till it became invisible, and retraversed the harbour, being accurately guided by aid of "the gyroscope," while distances were calculated by the number of turns of the screw. There were three officers and one seaman on board; but though the vessel remained in each trial ten minutes under water, the air remained quite pure, and the acoumulators retained force enough, for hours of work. The speed is not given. It is obvious. that such a vessel may be used for a variety of purposes, especially submarine exploration and the resous of submerged treasure; but as yet if does not promise much aid to the great art of destruction. People who kill always want a chance of living, and the Gymnote, if used as a ram, as Jules Verne suggested, would crush her crew as well as the enemy,

While lotteries and what are known as "sweeps." on horse racing are judged to be illegal in England they appear not to be quite so partionlar in the colonies. One of the greatest in- Direction of wind ... stitutions in connection with the turf in Australin is a gigantic £1. "sweep" promoted by a Rain well-tracted sportsman in Sydney named Adams. He brings off a sweep of £50,000 on every important race in the colonies, deducting 10 per cent for his trouble. On the last Melbourne Cup his £50,000 "Consultation" was filled up in remarkably quick time, and within four days of its closing he floated another £10,000 sweep. The money being all subscribed for this, he got off still another £10,000 affair, and, with several minor sweeps of £2,000 and so forth. Adams altogether held about £100,000 of public money pending the result of last year's Melbourne Cup. In the case of the £50,000 sweep the bolder of the first horse takes £25,000, less the promoter's commission, and the drawer of the second and third horses receives £10,000 and £5,000 respectively. The rest of the money is divided amongst those who draw horses-stariers and non-starters. The £25,000 on the last Melbourne Cup was, says the Hawk, drawn by a couple of miners, who subscribed 10s each and got a ticket. They placed £10,000 to their credit as fixed deposits in the Bank of New South Wales, and after drawing the £2,500 balance, went up to Teralba (a mining village near Newcastle) and demoralised the whole populace for a week with free drinks. After the spree was over, the lucky prize-winners went back to work at the mines.
